INTRODUCTION.

The Documents printed in this volume are to be found in two large folio books, one called the Book of Records, and the other the Vestry Minute Book. Both these books are now in fair condition. The Book of Records, which has been beautifully repaired, was, about 16 years ago, in a miserable condition.

I had intended to make a complete transcript of the Book of Records, but I found that this would seriously interfere with the continuity of the Minutes of the Vestry Meetings, which was, to my mind, the principal object I had to keep in view.

The Book of Records was originally prepared in 1486, for the purpose of containing—not the Records of the proceedings of the Vestry meetings—but a list of the property appertaining to the Parish and the evidences relating to it. It had been intended that the book should begin with an Index. The first pages are cut so as to allow of the insertion of an Alphabetical Index, but I do not think that this intention was ever even partially carried out.

The first document entered in the Book was a complete list of all the goods belonging to the parish, then follow various Wills relating to the parish property, memoranda of leases, and of a variety of other matters interesting to the parish. These memoranda have, from time to time, been added to up to the close of the seventeenth century. In the space which had been set apart for the Index, the earlier Vestry Minutes were entered, extending from the year 1559 to the year 1591. From the year 1591 to 1593 the entries are made in a different part of the book, and after the latter date they are entered in the second volume, which contains only Vestry Minutes. It seemed to me, therefore, that if I interposed between the earlier Vestry Minutes, the whole or a considerable part of the contents of the Book of Records, I should be destroying the continuity of the parish history. I have preferred, therefore, to place at the end of the Vestry Minutes, in an appendix, such documents from the Book of Records as I thought were immediately connected with or interesting for the present volume, reserving my intention of printing the whole or such parts of the rest of the contents of the Book of Records as I think necessary. A certain portion of it, which consists of copies of leases, I do not think will be necessary, nor am I sure that any good object will be attained by transcribing the whole of the Wills, though I propose hereafter to give an abstract of the most interesting portions of them.

The items which will, I think, be considered most interesting are those to be found in the earlier portion of the Vestry Minutes, and in the various inventories and miscellaneous articles taken from the Book of Records. Commencing with these later, I think the list of jewels, goods, and ornaments, the Articles agreed upon at a Vestry held in 1507, the assessment for the Pews in 1554, and for the Clerk's wages in 1561, will be considered among the most curious documents.

The Inventory of Church goods in 1488 has already been printed in the publications of the Society of Antiquaries, but I thought it well to print it again here, as when publishing the Parish documents, there were additions to it which it became necessary to make, but which were not necessary in the previous publication. The Inventory is interesting both to the student of antiquities and also as shewing the wealth of so small a parish as St. Christopher must always have been.

From the Articles drawn up in 1507, some instructive particulars may be gathered. It appears that the Curfew was rung at St. Christopher's at eight o'clock in the evening. The Articles prescribe regulations for the closing of the alley gate of the churchyard, and the times when it shall be opened. They prescribe that the Chaplain or Chauntry Priest shall not let his house, or any part of it; the manner and times at which the various services are to be performed in the Church; that none of the Chaplains shall go to any Trental; and that the Chaplains shall not go to their mass two at once, but shall go to their masses immediately the one after the other. It is probable that these Articles were entered in an earlier Vestry Minute Book, which is lost, because the particular entries are manifestly only copies. The memorandum of the assessment of the pews, made in the year 1524, is also very interesting and instructive.

It would seem that what are termed the Clerk's wages were collected by an assessment upon the pews, and the memorandum provides for the punishment to be inflicted upon any person who rebelled, so that he would not sit or pay according as was appointed by the assessors. The change of religion made no difference in these regulations, for in the year 1574, upon the occasion of a further sessment for "the byll of the Clarke's wages," it is provided as follows: "It is furdar agreed in this Vestery, that all suche as shall refuse to pay as they ar sessed for this iij years, the church wardens shall show the sessors thereof, & they shall be cauled beffour them, and yf they wyll not be perswaded by them to pay as they are sessed, then the churchwardens shall shew them in the ordynarys court, at the coust and charges of the parysh, a cording to an ansyent or Dar hear in this boak wretten."

This, no doubt, refers to the order made in 1524, just 50 years before.

It appears from other sources in the books that the whole of the money was not applied to the payment of the Clerk's wages, but went towards the general Ecclesiastical purposes of the parish; in fact, it was practically a church rate, in a form of a payment for the pews, but no part of the money raised in this way went, as far as I have been able to gather, towards the clergyman.

The description given of the pews is interesting. It will be gathered from it that there were certain pews in the body of the church set apart for women. Among them, one is described as being on the north side, "next pew before the shryving hous." It seems to have been usual to have such an article in the church though it went by different names. In the accounts of St. Michael's, Cornhill, printed by my friend, Mr. Alfred J. Waterlow, the first person who seriously undertook the work of re-producing those interesting documents, there is this entry in the year 1548:—

"Item paid to the joyner for takynge downe the shryvyng pew, and making another pew, in the same place, iij^s."

It would appear that the custom of having separate pews for women was common in London, because in the Minute Book of St. Michael's, under date 2nd February, 1583, is an entry in which these are alluded to. This entry is as follows: "Also it is agreed that ye Churchwardens shall make stayne foote paces at the women's pues in the church for their mayde svants to stand and knele on, & the lycke paces to be made in y^e quyre."

There are also minutes referring to subsequent assessments for the Clerk's wages in the years 1561 and 1562.

At page 74 there is a declaration of the value of certain Ecclesiastical property belonging to the parish, made in the first year of King Edward the 6th. It is stated that the premises were situated in the parish of St. Dunstan's in the West, that they were of the clear yearly value of 110 shillings. They were sold at 16 years' purchase to Mr. John Croke, of Chilton, in the County of Berkshire, subject to a lease to Mr. T. Witton, for 60 years from 35, Henry VIII. I presume that Mr. John Croke must have purchased on behalf of the parish as there is abundant subsequent evidence in the Records that the property early in Queen Elizabeth's reign, was again in the hands of the parish who were receiving the rents and profits, and as I remarked in the introduction to the parish accounts, it formed the subject of an interesting law-suit with the tenant Witton.

The minutes proper began in 1561. and I have extracted them as far as 1685. Taking them with the account books and registers they make a very complete history of the parish. From them we learn (page 2) that there was a water-fall and course in the churchyard, where no doubt the Wall-brook ran as an open stream.

The parish had a clock which caused them a great deal of trouble. In 1566, the churchwardens were ordered to "se the cloke pved" by the advice of a man of knowledge, and also mended, or new made, as nede shall require, so yt yt may be a good and pffyt cloke."

This not being successful, it would seem the parish determined to sell the clock, but before it was sold, viz. in 1572, "it was fardar agreed that wher as it was apoynted, that the clocke shudd have byne sowld, yt is now agreed that it shall be kepte, & one too be apoynted too kepe yt goinge, and to have for the keeping yt, vi^h viij^d by the yere."

In 1574, the parishoners again got tired of the clock, for it was agreed that the Churchwardens "shall do their best ffor the sellyg of the organs, the clocke, and the egle of brasse, to the most benefit of the prshe."

But neither did this succeed, for, in 1577, it was "agreed that some skylfull man have the sighte of the cloke, and ether to mend yt, or chang yt, or sell yt."

It was also "agreed that the cop. egell and the organs shall be solde."

It was also agreed "that these persons that hathe the doynge for the cloke shall have the barres of the chansell to be cote done, & to be sold for the most provete, and to be done in the beste forme and maner, and the pwlpete to be altered by theire dyscressyon, and to berne stēn. old papest bookse wh. remayned in ye vestery."

In the year 1578, in the list of goods, there appear :

Item, 1 payer of Organs.

Item, 1 Egle of Brasse, or lattin.

This is the last time they appear in the Minute Book. Their next appearance is in the Account Book, in 1581 :

Rd. for the Egle of Lattin or brasse	xlj ^s	vi ^d .
Rd. for the pillars of the ptcun sawne downe	xiiij ^s .	iiij ^d .
Rd. for the Orgaynes, w ^h . certaine old cubbords	xlviij ^s .	vj ^d .
Rd. for the Clocke, being very olde and worne	x ^s

And this is the end of them.

In the year 1573, there is an entry which is of some interest. At this time, Mr. Bartholomew Busfield was the Rector. It was "agreed that the parson, yf he can help the paryshe to recover all the money that John Baker, clarke to the Court of Conseyenes, hath in his hands, of the paryshes, that the parson shall have the on haufe thereof, baryng haufe the charges and standyng bond, as the paryshe by the ockacyon therof shall."

This was a Court established by an order of the Court of Common Council, in the 9th King Henry VIII., for the recovery of small debts under 40s. in the City of London, by a summary and inexpensive process. It was afterwards confirmed by Act of Parliament, in King James' reign, 1 James I. c. xiv. and was called the Court of Requests. The City of London, in respect of law reform, as in respect of every other improvement, was far in advance of the so-called superior law courts of the realm, and frequently incurred the odium of the lawyers practising in those Courts, for its cheap and expeditious manner of enforcing the rights of the citizens, notably, in the instance of this Court, which they tried to supersede, and the excellent Court of Arbitration on claims on policies of marine insurance, which they succeeded in abolishing.

It appears that the day upon which the Churchwardens were elected in the City parishes varied from time to time. I believe they were originally elected with the Common Council, upon St. Thomas's Day. They were all elected according to the custom of London, and I believe that the custom in St. Christopher's Parish, and in the whole of London, was, in Queen Elizabeth's reign, to elect Churchwardens to serve from Christmas to Christmas. Each Churchwarden, in turn, was elected as Junior Churchwarden, to take the place of the Churchwarden then going out of office. He was elected to serve for two years, so that in the second year he would be Senior Churchwarden, and the newly elected parishioner would be the Junior Warden.

As I have said, the elections took place at various times, but in and after the year 1580, they were held on the first Sunday in December, and the minutes usually mention the fact that the newly elected Warden was to remain Churchwarden for the period of two years, according to the accustomed order of the parish, or according to the ancient custom, and in one place it is said to be according to anneyntt custom, always used in the parish, to hold the election on the next Sunday after St. Andrew's Day, to hold office from the following Christmas.

The Churchwardens seem to have made up their accounts to Christmas, and this arrangement was eminently practical and convenient.

In the year 1605, the time of electing Churchwardens was changed to Easter Sunday, and this appears to have been the practice until 1635, when, under the auspices of Mr. John Macarnesse, the then Rector, upon the 15th April, "It was ordered and agreed by the Parson & the major part of the parish then psent, that, from henceforth, no Vestree shall be called or held in the parish upon the Saboth Day, and that the choosing of Churchwardens and other officers for the parish shall, every yere, be upon Easter Monday."

Notwithstanding that the custom of electing in December is stated to be antient, this is not borne out by the Vestry Minute Book. In 1559, the Churchwardens were chosen on the 10th March. In 1562, they were chosen upon "St. Matheyas Day, for the yer ensewing, and so an notha afta acordyng to the awnsyent custom." In 1564, the election was held on the 25th March, being our Lady Day. The elections seem to have been at various dates in February and March, until the year 1580, when, as I said before, they were made in December.

In St. Michael's, Cornhill, they were, by an ancient ordinance, to have held office for a year, from the Feast of the Purification, but from 1456 to 1556 they seem to have made up their accounts to All Saints' Day.

I would willingly dwell at length upon some of the other topics of interest in this book, but must content myself by mentioning one other.

At page 73, under date 5th June, 1561, is the following entry :—"Also 2^d ob is to be gathered every Sundaye by the Sexton, w^{ch} was wont to serve for holy breade, and nowe to serve for wyne for the comunion table, and if any overplus be left then the same to be geven to the po^r of the priisse."

Although I have never seen it mentioned in any book, it seems clear to me that originally it was the practice in England, as it is still in other Christian countries, for the parishioners to offer the bread to be used at the Holy Communion. No doubt this was done at a time when the parishioners ordinarily communicated with the Priest. The parishioners seem to have had a course by which they, in turn, provided the loaf. In the course of years, the bread thus offered for the Communion was distributed after the service. This distribution, which is common in the East, is called the Antidoron, and was, I believe, called in the French pain beni. I am not sure if this distribution was made in England at the time of the Reformation, or if the loaf was represented by a money payment only. The money payment was twopence, which was collected every week from the families whose turn it was to offer the loaf. The collection was made by the Parish Clerk.

We find an allusion to this practice in an obscure passage in the Parish books of St. Stephen's, Coleman Street. I call it obscure because it is written over an erasure, and is barely legible.

This passage reads as follows :—"Item. They shall be redy ev'y sonnonday after matens be sayd, to orden water and salte, and to cutte the holi loffe, s, ij^d ob and a ob loofe for the cantille sub pena of a ob to the chirch to be payd. Item. They shall see the pftt of the curate in offerings, in wax, in wyne, in brede."

It would seem from this that it was part of the Clerk's duty to cut the "holi loffe," the price of which was twopence ; but whether the loaf or the twopence was provided, is not clear.

The reformers of the Church of England adopted and availed of existing customs and institutions. The distribution of the bread was not made part of the custom of the Church of England, but an actual Communion was enforced, as appears from the rubrics of the first prayer book of Edward VI.

First there is a rubric plainly implying that the Holy Communion was to be celebrated daily except Wednesdays and Fridays ; afterwards the following direction—

"Likewise in chapels annexed and all other places there shall be no celebration of the Lord's Supper except there be some to communicate with the Priest and in such chapels annexed where the people hath not been accustomed to pay any holy bread there they must either make some charitable provision for the bearing of the charges of the Communion or else for receiving of the same resort to the parish Church."

There is then a provision made as to the distribution of the bread for the Communion ; the rubric then proceeds, "and for so much as the pastors and curates within this Realm shall continually find at their costs and charges in their cures sufficient bread and wine for the Holy Communion as oft as their parishioners shall be disposed for their spiritual comfort to receive the same. It is therefore ordered that in recompence of such costs and charges, the parishioners of every parish shall offer every Sunday at the time of the offertory the just value and price of the holy loaf with all such money and other things as were wont to be offered with the same to the use of their pastors and curates, and that in such order and course as they were wont to find and pay the said holy loaf ; also that the receiving of the Sacrament of the Blessed Body and Blood of Christ may be most agreeable to the institution thereof and to the usage of the primitive church, in all Cathedral and Collegiate Churches there shall always some communicate with the Priest that ministereth, and that the same may be also observed everywhere abroad in the country, someone at the least of that house in every parish to whom by course after the ordinance herein made it appertaineth to offer for the charges of the Communion or some other whom they shall provide to offer for them shall receive Holy Communion of the Priest, the which may be the better done for that they know before when their course cometh and may therefore dispose themselves to the worthy receiving of the Sacrament, and that him or them, who doeth so offer the charges of the Communion and other who be then Godly disposed thereunto shall likewise receive Communion, and by this means the minister having always some to communicate with him may accordingly solemnize so high and holy mysteries with all the suffrages and due order appointed for the same, and the Priest on the week day shall forebear to celebrate communion except he have some that will communicate with him."

This rubric is not repeated in the second Prayer Book of King Edward VI. 1552, but the practice of the contribution by houses is referred to thus:—"The bread and wine for the Communion shall be provided by the curate and the churchwardens at the charges of the parish, and the parish shall be discharged of such sums of money or other duties which hitherto they have paid for the same by order of their houses every Sunday." In Queen Mary's reign all this was altered, but on Queen Elizabeth's accession the order of the second Prayer Book of King Edward VI., in this respect, was re-enacted.

It was, no doubt, this alteration in the rubric which caused the parish to determine "that the ii^d. ob is to be gathered every Sundaye by the sexton w^{ch} was won to serve for holy breade and nowe to serve for wyne for the communion table." There is the following minute which shows that the collection of the 2^d. was afterwards discontinued and the bread and wine paid for out of the parish funds. A.D. 1570. "It was further agreed yt ye charge of the communioⁿ bred and wyne should be at ye cost of ye pishe hereafter, and to be in ye accōptes of ye church wardens."

The only other minute in this connexion is one fixing the times for the Holy Communion. This will be found at page 10. "At the same vestry it was condescended and agreed that once w^{ch} in the space of sixe weekes thear shal be a communion."

In other parishes in the city the Holy Communion was celebrated once a month, and the information afforded by the Records with regard to the church services and the time and mode of performing them is often very interesting.

I would instance this by two quotations from the minutes of St. Michael's, Cornhill, which I have before quoted. In the year 1563 the parish determined that "the first Sunday of every month the communion of Christ's body and blood should be read out and ministered." "The second Sunday children and servants after evening prayer to be catechised."

In 1568 the parish determined as follows:—"All Hallowes Day." "Att this vestre itt was agreed that upō evere Sondag there shold be a destens betwixthe the morning prayer and the pistill and gospell, and the lattine of the spayce of one ower or there abowtts, to the ēde thatt such svantts and otheres as could nott to cū fyrste morning prayer att the leeste they might cū unto ye pystill gospell and littany."

Other illustrations might be given, but I have not yet come across any other instance of an allusion to a collection for the holy loaf or for holy bread.

In 1662 in the revised Prayer Book the rubric was altered to a simple direction that the bread and wine at the Communion shall be provided by the curate and the Churchwardens at the charges of the parish.

I must defer a longer notice of the contents of these books until I can make it more comprehensive and general, than can be done in an introduction.

I cannot conclude without expressing again my obligations to my friend, Mr. Welch, of the Guildhall Library, for the valuable assistance he has afforded me.

* Lady Margaret Nerford was a cousin of the rector of St. Christopher's in the year 1417, in the reign of King Henry V.; she lived in the Parish and gave bequests to it and to other Parishes in the city. She was buried in St. Christopher's, and a copy of her will, which is very curious, is among the Records. She was a friend of Sir John Oldcastle, Lord Cobham.
